Dare County Schools Program Highlighted at State Conference

The Carolina College Advising Corps program of Dare County Schools was selected by the North Carolina School Boards Association to be presented at its annual conference held in Greensboro from November 16 through November 18. The conference was attended by 525 people, representing school boards from across the state.

Presenters from Dare County Schools were Arty Tillett, Director of Secondary Instruction, and Seth Rose, Carolina College Advising Corps advisor assigned to Dare County. Tillett and Rose explained how the program helps students and parents navigate the college application process, including selecting the right college; filling out financial aid applications; learning how to write application essays; and preparing to live in a college environment.
